Navient announces online investor forum to facilitate communication with ABS bondholders

WILMINGTON, Del., Sept. 16, 2015 (GLOBE NEWSWIRE) -- Navient (Nasdaq:NAVI), the nation's leading loan management, servicing and asset recovery company, announced the launch of a new online investor forum designed to facilitate communication with bondholders of securities backed by federally guaranteed student loans. The forum is provided by Navient through DealVector.

Through the new online investor forum, ABS investors can register to receive notifications regarding their bonds and can also communicate with Navient and directly with other bondholders through identity-protected messages.

"As the largest issuer of student loan backed securities, Navient is committed to supporting a well-functioning, transparent, and efficient market for our investors," said Somsak Chivavibul, chief financial officer, Navient. "To that end, we have adopted an innovative technology solution, and we encourage all of our ABS investors to register on DealVector's website."

To participate, bondholders can visit www.dealvector.com/navient or they can access the new online forum through a link at www.navient.com/abs.
